Amid the Orchids,
A Feast for Nero
And the Wolfe Pack

By FRED PERRETTE

to eat for a lifetime and would have been delighted at the sheer number of them. There were four dozen orchids in the two large vases on the table, and a dozen more hanging from the ceiling. The orchids were of every type, from small, delicate blossoms to large, showy blooms. The arrangement was so beautiful that it was hard to believe that they were all real. The flowers on the table were accompanied by a variety of other plants and flowers, including roses, tulips, and lilies. The setting was perfect for a special occasion or a celebration, with the flowers adding a touch of elegance and romance to the atmosphere.
